Classified Employee Evaluation Program

Definitions:

- I. Classified Employee: is a noncertified person, employed by the school district, who is not identified as supervisory or confidential.
 - A. Regular Classified Employee: Any classified employee who has been regularly employed by the district for a continuous period of not less than six successive months.
 - B. Probationary Classified Employee: Any classified employee who has been regularly employed by the district for a continuous period of not less than six successive months.
 - C. Temporary Classified Employee: A classified employee, who has been hired to fill a position which is seasonal, performs a specific task not able to be completed by a regular employee or alleviates a work overload condition.
- II. Supervisor: Any employee, the majority of whose time is devoted to service as a supervisor, principal, vice-principal, or director. Such service includes, but is not limited to, the monitoring of assigned employee performance, work planning and recommending persons for hire, retention or dismissal.

PURPOSE OF EVALUATION

It is the expressed desire of the Pendleton School District to maintain an orderly and efficient process by which our classified staff is evaluated. The district believes strongly that the evaluations derived are only as accurate and thorough as the communication cycle between the evaluator and persons being evaluated. Therefore, the practice of objective evaluation referencing the employee's job description and standards of performance is necessary to fulfill the purpose.

District policy requires that each classified employee be evaluated. The evaluation of a classified person will enable the employee and the district to determine the employee's improved growth in the assigned classification and to evaluate the performance of job responsibilities. The responsibility for evaluation resides with the district's supervisors and administrators.

The purpose and goal of all parties involved in employee evaluation is the improvement of performance. Evaluation should be a challenge and cooperative opportunity for the classified employee and evaluator. Evaluation of an employee is a cyclic process which is systematic and goal oriented. It requires that each participant assure a specific role during the evaluation and observation periods. The product of an effective evaluation system is a district or organization of work which is dynamic and emotionally healthy.

EVALUATION CYCLE

Supervisors or administrators begin the annual evaluation cycle by meeting with each classified employee assigned to them. The purpose of the meeting is to establish the classified employee's performance goal for the evaluation period. Form CL-1 is completed and signed by both the employee and the supervisor. The goal may be based on an area selected from the employee's job description and/or performance standards. The goal should be of particular importance to the individual employee's performance.

Goal Selection Criteria

- The goal should be important to improving the employee's performance.
- The goal must yield an observable behavior or product.

Often goals are generalized restatements of a general or specific performance standard and do not lend themselves to objective assessment without prior understanding of what specific behaviors or products the observer will measure. Classified employees who are probationary status must be evaluated during the six month probation period. Regular employees will be evaluated a minimum of once every year. Each evaluation requires at least one on worksite observation. Observation(s) using Form CL-2 for probationary employees need be accomplished between the second and fifth months of employment. Regular employee observation(s) need to be established between the terms "observation and evaluation". Observations are candid summaries of isolated employee performance episodes or products relative to the employee's performance standards, job description and/or goals which are on Form CL-1. Evaluations are defined as the overall assessment of the employee's performance relative to the general and specified standards of performance. The results of such evaluation are recorded on Form CL-3 and marked as evaluation.

An atmosphere of good cooperation and human relations during the evaluation cycle is necessary to recognize the employee's quality of work and improve a person's work performance. It is important that a connection exist between the subjective judgments of the observer and the objective performance of the employee. The observer's objectivity is increased when both participants understand the intent and purpose of the observer's subjective assessment. Both parties need to be aware of the standards and behaviors the observer will pay attention to during the observation period. This requires that such understanding conclude the performance goal conference and completion of CL-1. Such understanding will clarify and orient the observer to the employee's intent. The data collected or products assessed may then formulate the base criteria from which subjective judgments can be made and Form CL-3 completed.

OBSERVATION & EVALUATION PROCEDURE

Goal Setting

Administrator or supervisor will meet with each classified employee to discuss and set goals.

Observations and Data Collection

The results of informal observations/drop-in visits and information provided by any immediate supervisor may be documented and included in the evaluation.

Evaluation

The administrator or supervisor will conduct an evaluation meeting with the employee to discuss the summary of the employee's performance during the evaluation period. The evaluation is signed with copies provided to the employee, the supervisor and the employee's personnel file. Evaluations may occur as often in a given year as deemed necessary by the administrator or supervisor.

Plan of Assistance for Improvement

In the case where an employee's performance is deemed unsatisfactory, a Plan of Assistance for Improvement (PAI) shall be written in coordination with the administrator, the employee and, if desired, the employee's representative.
